1. On 29 July 1952 more than 200 jet planes were seen dispersed over various parts of the Spilve Airfield in Riga.
2. That night a great number (sic) of jet planes were observed in take-off and landing practice at this airfield. Most of the planes took off and landed at a course which was at right angles to the Daugava River. Landings were made in rapid succession with an unusually short time lapse between the landings of planes.
